Helping New York businesses and job seekers

For years, Google has supported digital skilling programs that can help sustain small businesses and help people secure fast-growing, good-paying jobs. With so many U.S. workers displaced by the COVID-19 pandemic, these solutions are even more critical to economic recovery. Technology creates growth opportunities for American businesses and can help American workers develop the skills they need to succeed in the digital economy.

to support small business resilience

In collaboration with Opportunity Finance Network (OFN), Google made a $180M commitment to support underserved small businesses across the country through the Grow with Google Small Business Fund and Google.org Grants program. The fund delivers low-interest loans to community development financial institutions (CDFIs), such as Harlem Entrepreneurial Fund, LLC., TruFund, and Primary Care Development Center and Grameen Capital with offices in Brooklyn and New York, NY. Google.org also provided a $3M grant to the Hispanics in Philanthropy’s PowerUp Fund, to help 150+ Latino-owned small businesses in New York state recover and grow.

underrepresented business owners trained in New York by local digital coach

In 2017, Google launched the Grow with Google Digital Coaches program in New York City. The program provides free hands-on coaching and digital skills training to help Black and Latino small businesses reach new customers, thrive online, and grow. Our New York Digital Coach has helped train more than 9,500+ small business owners through 150+ digital skills workshops.

New Yorkers enrolled in the Google IT Support Certificate program

Google is invested in expanding access to Google Career Certificates to help more people—particularly underserved—grow their careers. To date, the Google IT Support Certificate has been implemented through 100+ community colleges and dozens of career technical education sites, including Mohawk Valley Community College. 10,800+ New Yorkers have enrolled in the program and 60% of people who take the Google IT Support Certificate course are Black, Latino, women, or veterans.

“Reviews on our Business Profile on Google have been incredibly important. A lot of customers were convinced to visit here by all the positive reviews.”

Supporting New York nonprofits and local organizations

We know that organizations are already doing great work in New York. That’s why Google has partnered with trusted community institutions across the state to bring digital skills training, grant funding and other resources and services to more New Yorkers, including those historically underserved.

Google.org has awarded over $170M in grants to nonprofits and organizations based in New York, including organizations like Stonewall Community Foundation, NPower US, and education organizations like Pursuit, ExpandED Schools and CS4All which support the city’s current and future tech workforce.

Since 2004, Google employees based in New York—with matching contributions from Google—have donated $132M+ in charitable giving to nonprofits. Since 2008, Google employees in New York have also served 182K+ hours of volunteer and pro bono work with local nonprofits and organizations.

Google for Nonprofits provides organizations across the U.S. with access to Google products and programs such as Google Workspace for Nonprofits, Google Ad Grants, YouTube, and Google Maps Platform. Since 2011, Google for Nonprofits has supported more than 12,200+ nonprofits in New York like human rights nonprofit, Witness. In 2020, Google provided $82.88M in in-kind search advertising credit to New York nonprofits through the Google Ad Grants program.

Google for Startups partners with leading New York startup organizations that are supporting the state’s technology entrepreneurs, like Endeavor Insight, Company.co and Grand Central Tech, a residency program for NYC’s top 20 pre-Series A companies. Google has also invested $175M toward economic opportunity for Black business owners, startup founders, job seekers, and developers and created a $5M Google for Startups Black Founders Fund as part of the initiative. This fund will provide hands-on support and cash awards up to $100K to promising Black led-startups. Recipients include Toolbox and Uvii. Additionally, in partnership with American Underground, Google for Startups concluded its fifth annual Black Founders Exchange program last year. Since the program began, founders have collectively raised $23M+ in funding, including Vledge in Brooklyn.

In 2020, Google launched its first-ever, U.S. Department of Labor (DOL)-registered apprenticeship program in IT Support. The 12-month program features a cohort of 22 apprentices, including five in New York City. Apprentices in the program spend the first 8 weeks completing the Google IT Support Professional Certificate, and the following 10 months working at Google, getting hands-on experience and supplemental training in IT Support.
